The Adventure

I pulled my _____Adjective_____sword out of my backpack, and _____Verb_____a sideways vine. It bent in a odd position. Almost making it impossible to cut. My best friend, _____First name_____ was far behind. I could hear her rushing footsteps over the crunching dead leaves. We've been stuck in this _____Location_____for quite some time now, and it would be a pleasure just to see _____Noun_____again. With a few steps over rocks, and a twist and a turn around an _____Adjective_____maple _____Noun_____ something _____Noun_____from the distance. Had we'd find it? Or was it my imagination. Lexi finally caught up with me from behind, and adjusted her glasses. She gasped in awe of the sight. A few careful steps closer, it got brighter, but so did the suspense build. I could even hear her shaking. When I felt an odd step beneath my foot and stopped immediatly with a jump backwards. A rope started pulling its way up a tree, and a snap, and a boulder fell, landing on a _____Adjective_____wooden _____Noun_____. Another rock went flying, about to block the entrance! Lexi and I _____Adjective_____as fast as we could, and slid right through a crack on the floor. And the rock landed behind us with a thud. Blocking the entrance. But it was all worth it, because what we saw wasn't an allusion. There sat the sparkling blue diamond on a silver carved petistol. "We did it!"; I chuckled. "Now how do we get it, but still find a way out?";.
