The Extra Thanksgiving Guest

Mrs. Daffodil organized a field trip to Old MacDonald's farm in order for her class to meet the thanksgiving turkeys. She took eight children on a school bus. The children were so delighted to finally meet these plump _____ feathery friends. The children _____ and played with the turkeys. One little child, Sally, noticed an ax hanging from the _____ wall. She turned to Old MacDonald who wore polyester _____. She asked what the ax was used for. He said with a cackle, "Once you little darlings leave, I am going to chop those little birds into pieces for _____ thanksgiving feasts." Little Sally's lip started to quiver. She quickly returned to the other seven children and told them the news. The children began to sob. Mrs. Daffodil and Old MacDonald _____ to the well to fetch _____ of water for the children. When they returned, the children looked mysteriously _____. They had stuffed the turkeys under their coats. The children (with turkeys, too) and Mrs. Daffodil boarded the _____ to return home. Old MacDonald returned to the turkey pen, and noticed that it was empty. He scratched his head bewildered by the absence of his _____ turkey feasts. On that particular thanksgiving day eight households celebrated Thanksgiving with an extra guest. They enjoyed toast and jelly for their thanksgiving feast.
