remeber

You remember the time you first saw First name

Though your eyes had gone past long before then

As had mine, and they passed you right over

On the day that you knew I was there.

It took time, and it shocked me in coming

To discover I watched you with longing,

But I had to act carefree and happy

For I feared you would see that I cared.

You

were there all the time in the shadows

Barely out of the reach of my fingers,

But when grief and unhappiness shook me,

I was quick to find respite in you.

There was suddenly joy--unexpected,

But as welcome as light from the heavens

In my life, and I held to you tightly--

You and pain were all realness I knew.

You picked up my heart from its prison,

You showed me a way of surviving.

I loved you with all of my being,

But I loved and I lived still with pain,

For the love that before had sustained me

Now was making me restless, and fearful

That you wouldn't forgive or believe me

If I said you shared none of the blame.

You will wait in the silence to hear _____Noun_____;

You will listen, but you will hear nothing--

I cannot say the words that will hurt you;

I cannot burn the bridge, walk away.

Now, as it grows late, I grow tired;

I will sleep, and keep thinking _____
Noun

And I pray that my silence will tell you

Everything I can't make myself say.
