Homies

I've always been a(n) Adjective kid, but it never stopped me from having friends somehow. I even had a(n)) adjective friend, friend's name1, who just adored plural noun1. Now tell me that wasn't meant to be because I ADORE plural noun1! But, our friendship only lasted number days, partly because plural noun1 is all we had in common and also because I enjoyed spending my time verb ending in ing and friend's name1 liked to verb. The two just don't mix! So, I set about looking for a new friend. That's when I met another friend1. What a(n) adjective person! We could sit for amount of time, i.e. days, years and talk about adjective plural noun and how we liked to noun them! We also had the same love of plural animal. We spent a lot of time at place i.e. the race track, Walmart and watch the adjective people as they walked by. We would shout something you shout to see if we could get a reaction. Mostly people would just stop and look at us for a second, but once this adjective guy got really pissed and said '*Kiss my adjective body part! That was the last time we did that! There was another time, we snuck out of the house to go to s/o or crush's house. When we finally got there we couldn't believe what we saw! s/o or crush again was verb ending in ING that you can do to someone else, i.e. kissing a noun! I will never talk to that *punk, ahole, weirdo, etc . * again as long as I live! My friend and I got home and ate a ton of food1 and passed out. Thank God for * food1* and friends!
