Dragon Ball Z

Dragon Ball Z has a strong theme that young people can achieve great things, despite their inherent drawbacks. One example is during the Cell Games Saga, in which _____First name_____is given the responsibility of defeating the _____Adjective_____Noun_____ which he does after unlocking his inner _____Noun_____. In addition, Gohan starts out at age four in the series, and accomplishes much despite his young age.

A second theme is the turning of fortunes in a battle through _____Verb ending in ing_____or _____Verb ending in ing_____ _____Plural noun_____. Many battles proceed almost to defeat for the heroes, finally to be reversed through a desperate act to defend their home or _____Adjective_____Noun_____. Characters who have used this to their advantage include Goku, Gohan and even _____Name of a person_____. This theme is found in almost every battle.

One of the main and deepest of themes is fatherhood. Not only is it seen in the obvious example of Goku and his sons, but also Vegeta, who has a hard time _____Verb ending in ing_____Plural noun_____ but eventually learns what it means to be a father as seen in the Cell Games,and Buu Sagas, and most of Dragon Ball GT. Other signs of this being a theme are the lesser characters all having a father or being the father of a main character such as Mr. Satan, Dr. _____Proper noun_____ or Burdock. Even the villains show fatherhood as a theme, through Freeza and King Cold, Babidi and Bibidi, Broly and _____Name of a person_____ and Piccolo Daima? and _____First name_____Jr.
