my best fiend

Just like Napoleon and Pedro, my best friend First name and I go together like meat Plural noun.

We run together at school; we ride Verb around town, and help each other with our Noun - work . Not only that, but Plural noun also offers me his/her protection. For example, I was recently riding my bike over some very rough Plural noun near a/an Adjective ravine. I hit one particularly Noun and went flying in the Noun. Same person jumped off his/her Noun and caught me before I could fall off Adjective cliff. No one had ever risked his/her Noun to save me like that before. I guess that's what good Plural noun are for. You stick your Part of body out for each other no matter what the Plural noun are.
