

Television Programming

1. Adjective
2. Name Of A Person
3. Plural Noun
4. Adjective
5. Plural Noun
6. Name Of A Person
7. Location
8. Plural Noun
9. Noun
10. Name Of A Person
11. Noun
12. Verb Ending In Ing
13. Past Tense Verb
14. Adjective
15. Plural Noun

Television Programming

Since televisions first arrived there have been charges that some programming is, in one way or another, inappropriate, offensive or Adjective. Critics such as Name of a person Kilborne have claimed that television, as well as other mass media Plural noun harm the self image of Adjective Plural noun. Other commentators such as Name of a person Jhally make the case that television advertisers in Location deliberately try to equate happiness with the purchasing of products, despite studies which show that happiness for most people comes from non-material Plural noun such as warm friendships and feelings of connection to ones Noun. Name of a person Gerbner has presented evidence that the frequent portrayals of crime, especially Noun crime, has led to the Mean World Syndrome, the view among frequent viewers of television that crime rates are much higher than the actual data would indicate. In addition, a lot of television has been charged with Verb ending in ing propaganda, political or otherwise, and being Past tense verb at a Adjective Plural noun level.