The Appointment

A sixteen-year-old boy worked on his grandfather's Noun farm. One morning he drove a Adjective pickup truck into Location on an errand. While he was walking along the Adjective street, he saw Death. Death Past tense verb him. The boy drove the truck back to the farm as Adverb as he could. 'Give me your Noun, he begged. 'I'll go to Location. He'll never Same verb (present) me there.' His grandfather gave him the truck and his noun and the boy sped away Adverb. After he left, his grandfather went into location looking for Death. When he found him, he asked, 'Why did you Same verb (present) my grandson in such a Adjective way? He's only sixteen. He's too Adjective to die.' 'I am sorry about that,' said Death. I did not mean to Same verb (present) to him. But I felt Adjective when I saw him here. You see, I have a Noun appointment with him this afternoon-in Location.
