Live Free or Die Hard - Movie Review

1. Noun _____

2. Adjective _____

3. Noun _____

4. Plural Noun _____

5. One Word Insult _____

6. Noun _____

7. Same Insult _____

8. Physical Characteristic _____

9. Plural Noun _____

10. Animal _____

11. Adjective _____

12. Adjective _____

13. Same Animal _____

14. Physical Characteristic _____

Live Free or Die Hard - Movie Review

How do you top Die Hard With A Vengeance? Good set pieces, a nasty _____Noun_____ a _____Adjective_____ sidekick in the form of Samuel L. Jackson and Bruce Willis on absolutely, positively top form. A winning combination in short. How do you top that?

Die Hard 4.0 starts when a criminal _____Noun_____starts to take down the entire computer and technological structure that supports the _____Plural noun_____of the United States and it's up to a decidedly 'old school' hero, police detective John McClane, to take down the conspiracy, aided by a young _____One word insult_____.

Bruce Willis shows that he can still wipe any one of the newcomers off the screen with a nod of his weary face. The man has screen charm and charisma by the _____Noun_____loads. Justin Long is the young _____Same insult_____ side-kick, Matt Farrell. Matt Farrell is not _____Physical characteristic_____nor is he really wise cracking. Justin Long plays him as a guy way out of his league. Most of the time he is merely bewildered by McClanes _____Plural_____ noun_____and the violence that seems to follow them wherever they go.

Timothy Olyphant plays Thomas Gabriel, the _____Animal_____behind the whole scheme. He simply does not have the same nasty, _____Adjective_____ endearing evilness the other Die Hard _____Adjective_____ _____Same_____ animal_____had before him. He might be _____Physical characteristic_____enough but he simply does not have the presence to fill the screen.

Live Free or Die Hard opens in the US on June 29.