The Apes And Two Travelers

TWO MEN, one who always spoke the truth and the other who told nothing but lies, were traveling together and by chance came to the land of Plural noun. One of the Plural noun, who had raised himself to be king, commanded them to be seized and brought before him, that he might know what was said of him among men. He ordered at the same time that all the Plural noun be arranged in a long row on his right hand and on his left, and that a throne be placed for him, as was the custom among men. After these preparations he signified that the two men should be brought before him, and

them with this salutation: \\\What sort of a king do I seem to you to be, O strangers?\\' The Lying Traveler replied, \\'You seem to me a most Adjective king.\\' \\'And what is your estimate of those you see around me?\\' \\'These,\\' he made answer, \\'are worthy companions of yourself, fit at least to be Adjective and leaders of armies.\\' The Ape and all his court, gratified with the lie, commanded that a Adjective present be given to the flatterer.

On this the truthful Traveler thought to himself, \\'If so great a reward be given for a lie, with what gift may not I be rewarded, if, according to my custom, I tell the truth?\\' The Ape Adverb turned to him. \\\'And pray how do I and these my friends around me seem to you?\\\ \\'Thou art,\\\ he said, \\'a most excellent Ape, and all these thy companions after thy Plural noun are excellent Apes too.\\\'

The King of the Apes, enraged at hearing these truths, gave him over to the Noun and claws of his companions.
