The Tale of King Marjorie

One day there was a Adjective cat named Marjorie. He was the prince of a large Noun filled with Adjective scholars. Marjorie was a haughty young Noun and always ignored what the scholars had to say. 'I laugh in your faces, men of Verb ending in ing!' he would cry, as he stood atop the highest Noun. The sagacious old men would gather around the base of the tower and grumble. 'I can't believe we have to serve this Noun, they would say, 'really he is a haughty jerk!' After a time, the scholars devised a Noun whereby Marjorie, acting out of pure hubris, would unwittingly cause his own Noun. The plan was executed and the scholars Past tense verb happily ever after in perpetual intellectual Noun.
