Good Times

Once there was a hockey           Noun           who wanted to           Verb           basketball. However the evil hockey           Noun           wanted to           Verb           him and the entire           Plural noun           for the rest of their           Plural noun          . In order to           Verb           the           Adjective                     Noun           plans the hockey players disguised           Plural noun           as vegetables. The           Adjective                     Noun           was allergic to all veggies so the team made themselves into a           Adjective                     Noun          . The plan was foiled when the           Adjective                     Noun           took a dose of           Noun           and found the hockey team and forced them to play another           Noun          . The hockey           Noun           then used the           Noun           as a           Noun           and           Verb           him into a magic           Noun          . Whooo hooo! 'The evil           Noun           can never           Verb           us to           Verb           hockey again', they           Verb           as they grabbed a basketball. Only to           Verb           that white           Noun           can't jump.
