Suicidal Squirrels

I went out to _____Verb yesterday afternoon and was getting out of my _____Noun just as the vet's _____Noun zoomed past the _____Noun. When I arrived at the _____Plural noun the vet, the farrier, the _____Noun manager, and several other volunteers and boarders were doing their best to get Bella up. She went down about an hour before I got there, and the farrier and _____Noun manager were right there and at her side instantly. Bella suffered nerve damage in her _____Body part from West Nile, and then, a year later, managed to survive EPM but not without lingering severe neurological problems. Two other rescues rejected her before she made it to us, and I guess we have a weakness for retired, damaged _____Plural noun. She had a lot of trouble _____Verb ending in ing but, through massages and physical _____Verb ending in ing was sound enough to enjoy many years at the rescue _____Verb ending in ing with the other mares in pasture and getting love from all her _____Adjective friends. Often she would roll and need help moving her hind legs into position to stand up again, but she always got up on the first or second try!

Yesterday, however, was very different. It looked and felt as if her legs were petrified- we could not move them into position for her, and after a couple attempts she stopped putting much _____Plural noun into it. By the time got there, she looked completely _____Adjective and was barely lifting her head. The decision was made to put her down, and it was a _____Adjective one to be present for. Always a fighter, Bella was on her side, whinnying to her friends, 'running' with her front legs, and looked each of us in the eye before she calmed down, took a few _____ Adjective breathes, and was still as the last dose was administered. As the vet said, not many

_____
Plural noun can survive West Nile AND EPM, then live a happily into their late teens with the severe neurological damage Bella willfully pushed through!

2009 has been a hard year for many, and the _____ Noun was no exception. In addition to three of our 33+ year olds, our 29 year old _____ Noun and Bella all passing on, we saw four horses return to the rescue after their owners could no longer afford their _____ Noun two of whom came back sick but thankfully in good weight. This year, we have had so many horses in need that we perpetually had horses in iso pens, boarding spaces, and even turned out with boarders' horses.

On the plus side, we participated in a nation-wide effort to save 300 starving _____ Plural noun and our two boys are looking _____ Adjective and have started groundwork training with a professional who has volunteered his time! The downturn in the economy left us with some very nice _____
Verb ending in ing _____ Plural noun
who were adopted before they left iso, and many volunteers finally had the chance to adopt a _____ Noun that met

their Verb ending in ing needs. We took in a Noun from a kill pen who, at four years old, has grown more than 6' now that she's being properly Past tense verb. We took in a horse who had been Past tense verb along the highway and was severely underweight, but clearly well-trained, and watched him transform into a Adjective sound gelding who will make someone a very Adjective Verb ending in ing Noun. And, thanks to the Adjective spring, Noun prices went down enough that we could still afford to take in all the extra Plural noun in need :-).
