Creature in the Night

My team and I recently searched for the mysterious Animal of Place name. We had pitched our Plural noun and were trying to get some sleep, despite the howls of nearby Animals. Earlier, we had cooked Food with Food sauce over the camp stove. Perhaps that was responsible for our uneasiness.

Suddenly, from the darkness beyond, we heard an unearthly Verb ending in ing. Instead of the creature we had come to find, this could only be the Adjective Animal of myth and legend.

We Past tense verb from our tents, grabbing any weapons we could find, mostly Plural noun and Plural noun. The creature Past tense verb before us. It was appallingly Adjective with Verb ending in ing eyes. Instead of fingers or claws, it had five Plural noun on each leg. Worst of all, it had a Verb ending in ing Noun where its Body part should have been. I am ashamed to say I Past tense verb with fright.

When I came to, our camp site had been Past tense verb. Cook had lost his Noun and all of the Plural noun belonging to our medic were missing. We had no choice but to Verb to Place name for rest and Plural noun. Our adventure was sadly Past tense verb.
