A Mathematical Day

It was another Adjective day. Sherlich pulled her Adjective Vehicle into the school's Adjective parking lot, and ran inside. She made a quick stop into the Room where she shared a Greeting; with some of her Adjective colleagues - Jeremy, Chanales, Name of a person and Name of a person. Shira had a Adjective schedule today - only Number classes, back to back. She entered her first class, and saw to her dismay the students were Verb ending in ing Adverb all over the class. "Let's get started,"; she said Adverb. "By the count of Number you are all to be seated with your Plural noun out."; Once they were all seated Adverb she started to teach her Adjective students about Plural noun triangles, and areas. In her next class, she was greeted by students speaking with a Country (in adjective form) accent. She tried Adverb to contain her laughter, but to no avail. In her next class, she put on a Adjective musical performance, and in no time, the students were all Verb ending in ing and Verb ending in ing with excitement and Noun. Then she had advisory. Advisory was usually Adjective and Adjective but she was determined to make it Adjective this time. And that's just what she did. Well, the day continued, Adverb with Sherlich bringing Noun Noun and cheer wherever she went. The end.
