Cindy's 50th Birthday

One day last month, Cindy realized that tuning 50 was not going to be so easy. She had been working nonstop (well, from 10 am until three on most days) and the kids'; busy schedules were wearing her down. Her husband, Adam, was always _____Verb ending in ing_____poker and only cooking dinner six nights a week. He hadn't even been to the grocery store in a few days and Cindy was getting depressed that not only was she turning 50, but that she may have to by her own birthday cake! On top of all of this, her young boss, Tyler, wasn't letting her take 2-hour lunches anymore and "work Adam"; was not pulling his _____Body part_____. Her 3 lovely girls, Sami, Manda and _____Name of a person_____ did not seem to appreciate the fact that Cindy bent over backwards for them, even occasionally letting them do after-school activities from time-to-time.

The straw that really broke the _____Animal plural_____back was the incessant feeling that Cindy was forgetting to do something important. She couldn't quite put her finger on it, but she knew it had something to do with turning the big 5-0. She called each one of her girlfriends (subsequently making lunch plans for the next 2 years) and asked for their help in this matter.

thought it would be a good idea to organize her fears on a list and check-off all that she's accomplished in the last 50 years. Lauren also said that she would run some errands for Cindy if she was really bogged down or Adam was away in _____Location_____Jersey.

A _____Adjective_____relaxing trip to Canyon Ranch is all you need, suggested Beth. Besides, we need a roommate for Andrea.

Jackie convinced Cindy that she needed a _____Adjective_____wardrobe for her second helf-centrury on earth and that a huge King of Prussia trip of eminent.

Temple Sinai is eating away at all of your free time, insited Freda. You know the Torah is _____Expletive_____and I'm only involved for free Manishevitz.

Speaking of wine, Kelly wanted to discuss Cindy's nagging thoughts over a Container of Pino Grigio. She suggested they meet for happy hour that night.

When hearing of Cindy's issue, Alyson immediately put pen to Noun and tried to write a creative poem to cheer Cindy up. She could read it for entertainment at Cindy's Bithday party, she thought.

As it got closer to Cindy's 50th birthday, it finally dawned on her that the feeling that she was forgetting to do something had to do with the fact that her husband, Adam, had misheard her request for a birthday party. She came to the realization that when she asked him for a NIGHT HERE Adam had handed her a LIGHT BEER!

With the mystery solved, Cindy was able to pull off a last-minute Noun by setting Adam straight and making a list for him and telling him what to make and what to buy and what to wear... and what he should do in case of a snowstorm. And thus, a great time was had by all, thanks to Cindy, at Cindy's 50th birthday bash!
